TRAINING SHIP HARTFORD WILL BE HERE TO-DAY

COMES TO BE EQUIPPED WITH THE DE FOREST SYSTEM OF WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY, AND WILL REMAIN FOR SOME WEEKS.

The training ship Hartford, one of the most historic vessels now in the United States navy, will reach port today. The vessel comes direct from Key West, at which port she touched a few days ago while making her itinerary.

The present visit of the Hartford is for the purpose of being equipped with the DeForest system of wireless telegraphy, which has been adopted by the navy, and is now being installed upon all vessels and at all navy yards. The vessel, however, was to touch at Pensacola on her trip, but it is not anticipated that she would reach port so early a date. Owing to the fact that she was not equipped with the wireless system it was decided by the department to have her put into Pensacola at once, and as a consequence she is to come direct from Key West to this port.

The electricians at the navy yard, who are now engaged in erecting the station there, will install the system on the Hartford. This cannot be commenced, except in a preliminary way, until the station at the yard is completed. The latter will be finished in a few days and then the work upon the Hartford will be commenced.

In equipping a vessel with the system the workmen do not encounter the same difficulties they do in installing the system at the navy yard, owing to the fact that no masts are necessary as in navy yards.

It is anticipated that the Hartford will remain in Pensacola harbor for several days, or in fact until the North Atlantic fleet assemblies at Culebra. The cruiser Columbia will return to Pensacola after being docked in New Orleans, and will likewise remain here until the departure of the Hartford. She is due to be docked on January 12. Both vessels will later return to port with the combined squadron for a stay of several months.

A Painful Incident.

Two burglars broke into the house of a merchant who was generally considered to be very rich. After heroic efforts they managed to open the safe, but who can describe their disappointment when they found that it was empty and all their labor in vain? At that moment the master of the house, awakened by the noise, appeared on the scene. For a moment all three stood there as if turned to stone. The merchant was the first to come to himself.

"Gentlemen," he said, "let us all maintain a discreet silence over this incident, and now permit me to show you to the door."—Berlin Journal.

New Chinese Minister To the United States

THE CHINESE MINISTER, LIANG CHENG.

The Chinese Minister to this country is Liang Cheng, who has attempted to make some headway in the matter of obtaining better terms for his coolie countrymen for admission into the United States. The failure of his predecessor in this line caused him to be sharply reprimanded from Peking.

Blenheim and Marlborough.

The original Blenheim is a small village in Bavaria on the left bank of the Danube, near the town of Hochstett. The battle was fought between the English and their allies, commanded by the celebrated John, first duke of Marlborough, and the French and Bavarians under Marshal Tallard and the elector of Bavaria. The result of the fighting was the utter defeat of the latter with the loss of about 12,000 killed and 13,000 prisoners, including Tallard. Bavaria became the prize of the conquerors. In recognition of his brilliant services the British parliament gave Marlborough the honor of Woodstock and the "hundred" of Woodstock and built for him the splendid palace at Woodstock which is named after the great victory he had just achieved. Formerly it contained an almost unique collection of paintings and art treasures. A fire, however, in 1861 destroyed the "Titian gallery" and the pictures, which were a present from Victor Amadeus, king of Sardinia, to the first duke. Other pictures, the library and valuables of different kinds were sold years ago.

His Only Victory.

"Rarely, very rarely," asserted a west side resident, "do I repeat to a friend something that I've been saying to another friend. But I did say a good thing to my wife the other day. Generally I don't indulge in repartee with her. Ideas come to her more rapidly than they do to me. This was an exceptional case. I'll agree that women are pretty sensible in most things, but in some things they're unreasonable, especially in money matters. They have to make a little money go so far for themselves that they imagine it can be stretched until it accomplishes wonders. My wife was discussing a new servant. 'I don't wonder that folks are poor,' she said laughingly. 'I get out of all patience with them, they're so careless and improvident. Do you know this girl of ours had to walk up here? She didn't even have car fare.'"

"'Didn't you tell me, I asked, 'that this girl worked in a hotel for $3.50 a week, that she had to pay $1.50 for a room, that her washing cost her a dollar a week, and that she had to clothe herself and look neat on a dollar a week?'"

"'Yes,' she admitted. 'Well,' I said, 'what did you expect she'd have a bank account?' 'We've been married fourteen years, and this was the first time that my wife didn't get back at me and make me sorry I'd spoken. I put on a swagger that evening that made the house look too small for me.'—Providence Journal.

Wives Must Work in Japan.

As an example of the humble attitude of the Japanese wife Mrs. Hugh Fraser relates this incident: "A middle aged man on the upper floor was suffering terribly from heat, and his little wife seemed greatly distressed about him. All the screens had been opened, but it was a breathless day, and no breeze came to ring the little glass bells on the hanging fern wreath on the veranda. The man sat with his head in his hands groaning, while his wife, kneeling on the mats behind him, fanned his back and from time to time rubbed him down with a blue towel, an expression of the deepest respect and sympathy on her face. When he seemed a little better she busied herself with preparing tea, which he drank eagerly and of course made himself frightfully hot again, when she went back patiently to her fanning and rubbing."

Kilkenny Cats.

During the rebellion which occurred in Ireland in 1798, or it may be in 1803, Kilkenny was garrisoned by a troop of Hessian soldiers who amused themselves in barracks by tying two cats together by their tails and throwing them across a clothesline to fight. The officer, hearing of the cruel practice, resolved to stop it. As he entered the room one of the troopers, seizing a sword, cut the tails in two as the animals hung across the line. The two cats escaped, minus their tails, through the open window, and when the officer inquired the meaning of the two bleeding tails being left in the room he was coolly told that two cats had been fighting and had devoured each other, all but the tails.

Caste and Cash.

How to avoid the appearance of contentment is one of the hardest problems that confront our provincial aristocracy. It is second only in importance to that high achievement, the simulation of well bred indifference to what the world thinks. To prove one's right to be numbered of the caste of Vere de Vere one must be untrammelled by old fashioned customs and moth eaten prejudices founded on medieval sentiment. The distinction between the representative of the up to date aristocracy of wealth branded with the hall mark of the elect and the mere pretentious climber is that the latter, uncertain as to his footing, is something of a hypocrite and pauses to consider effect. He does not enjoy that freedom of restraint that gives an air of abandon to the new rich who are already high and dry on the upper crust.—San Francisco Town Talk.

A BRONZE FLOWER.

Prettiest Morning Glory That Ever Bloomed in a Tomato Can.

While I devoured my sandwiches, finger marks and all, with a mighty appetite at noontime of my first day at work with the iron molders Mike reached over into a neighboring yard and plucked a crisp climbing morning glory. Holding the delicate blossom up for my inspection, he said, "Young feller, kin you make me one-just like that in bronze?" I was quite sure I could not. "But," said he, "you needn't think it can't be done. First you get an old can, punch a hole through the bottom of it with a nail and stick the stem of the flower through the hole, leaving the blossom inside. See?" I saw. "Next you fill the can with water and drop into the water bit by bit nice fine sand. Mind you, go slow. After a long time the water will leak out, leaving the blossom buried in the sand, but still in good shape. Now you'll dry the whole thing in the core oven and bake it. That will burn the blossom to ashes. Then if you have the patience to shake it and shake it till all the ashes drop out through the stem you'll be ready to pour in your metal, and if you do as I tell you, and make no mistake and try about six times you'll have in the end the prettiest morning glory that ever bloomed in a tomato can."—Scribner's.

FRIENDSHIP.

It Imposes Serious Duties Upon Those Who Court It.

"When acquaintanceship ripens into friendship, something serious has come into one's life," writes Mrs. Henry Graham in the Outlook. "I don't think that any one can or ought to afford to have more than one or two really intimate friends. If love has gone with friendship—that is, if the gates of paradise have been opened to you, and the guardian angel has sheathed his flaming sword and admitted you through the portals—then you must have given everything, and you have very little left to give. A man can have a man friend and a woman a woman, because there are places where men meet men and women meet women alone, neutral ground where the other sex cannot enter because of its limitations, and there real friendship may live and thrive on the crumbs which fall from the rich man's table. "For friendship implies something serious. You must give of yourself, your real self, and once given it cannot be taken back. One has no right to give up a friendship unless the other person agrees or unless it has become an absolute impossibility, and even then all the obligations of life may survive, while the delights of it die."

Quaint Scotch Custom.

Natives of the northeast coast of Scotland observe a curious custom at funerals. After the burial service the coffin is carried outside the house and placed upon the two chairs on which it had rested within doors. As soon as the pallbearers lift up their burden and begin their journey to the graveyard these chairs are at once thrown sharply on their backs. In this position they are kept until the interment has taken place, when they are taken indoors again. Any attempt to place the chairs on their legs or to take them in before the proper time is at once frustrated by the relatives of the dead.

The Teacher's Present.

The old schoolmaster was deeply affected. His scholars, noticing the dilapidated appearance of his chair, had presented him with a new one for Christmas. "My dear boys," said the staid old man, with tears in his eyes, "I can never hope to tell you how you have made me feel by this token of your love for me. All I can do is to thank you for the sacrifices you have made of your little purses for the sake of my comfort. If you have found me severe at times I trust you realize that it has always been for your own good." As the old schoolmaster prepared to sit down in his new chair he unconsciously ran his hand over the seat in search of bent pins—Philadelphia Ledger.
